

Newsweek editor to lecture

Frank M. Maier, Chicago bureau chief for Newsweek magazine, will visit Tech's mass communications department as editor-in-residence today and Thursday.

Before joining Newsweek as a reporter of the Chicago bureau in 1970, Maier was a reporter for the Chicago Daily News for four years. During this time, he won a Chicago Newspaper Guild award for an 18-month investigation of a major Chicago park scandal.

During his two-day visit, Maier will speak to several news writing, magazine writing, reporting and mass communications classes. At 10:30 p.m., he will have coffee with faculty and students in Room 105 of the Mass Communications Building.

He also will visit The University Daily newsroom at 2 p.m. today.

Students who are not enrolled in any of the listed classes may still attend any of the sessions he will lecture. For more information, contact the Mass Communications office.

Dorm rates even with inflation

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following article is the second in a series of articles about inflation at Tech and how the inflation is affecting the finances and expenses at Tech.

By PETE McNABB
UD Reporter

Despite the day-to-day market fluctuations of food and an 18 percent projected annual inflation rate for 1980, housing officials say room and board prices at Tech are expected to stay even with or fall below inflation in the 1980-81 academic year.

The median room and board bill for Tech students rose this year by 14 percent, from $1269 to $1447, housing records showed.

The new rates for next year will be calculated by the Housing Office later this month and will then go to the Board of Regents in their May meeting for approval.

The room and board payments collected from the students cover a variety of expenses, some of which change throughout the academic year and are hard to predict, officials said.

The price of food, which composes about 23 percent of the dorm bill, is perhaps the hardest to predict because of the daily and sometimes hourly fluctuations of the market, according to Tom Razy, assistant director of housing.

Since food prices change so regularly, many items are bought through short-term contracts — sometimes very short-term.

Produce is the worst culprit of the short-term contract game, according to Razy. Bids are accepted each week for produce from area merchants. The lowest bidder is awarded the produce contract for the next week, Razy said.

Perhaps the most stable food commodity is beef. Beef contracts are usually set up for every three months, Razy said. However, the price can still exceed budget predictions, since the budget is arranged several months in advance.

Wages and salaries for dorm employees compose the majority of the dorm bill with 33.5 percent. However, since the salaries usually don't fluctuate during the year, they are not effected by inflation, according to Wade Thompson, assistant director of housing. Thompson said employee's pay could go up during the year through cost of living raises but that usually don't occur more than once a year.

Utilities and maintenance also make up a large part of the dorm bill. Housing Services Manager Richard Hodges said maintenance costs are expected to increase by about five percent next year, while utilities are expected to rise 10 percent.

Hodges said Tech's utilities are controlled the same way individual's home utilities are controlled — through the electric company. Therefore, prices are slightly more stable but are still subject to take unpredictable increases.

A fourth major expense is the debt repayment on dorm mortgage. Twelve percent of the dorm bill goes to the repayment, housing records showed. Other expenses paid for through dorm bills are telephone bills and insurance expenses.

Thursday, The University Daily will report about increased tuition and fees at Tech and how the present expenses compare with other universities.

Cavazos emphasizes 'unity' at general faculty meeting

By PAM WEIGER
UD Reporter

Tech president Lauro Cavazos, in the first general faculty meeting in the 55-year history of Tech, told faculty members Tuesday that his highest priority is to establish a sense of unity throughout the university.

"The theme for my tenure is 'a sense of university,'" Cavazos told a large audience in the University Center Theater.

Cavazos said he has spent his first week in office attempting to learn about Tech. He outlined several areas he perceived as areas that need to be addressed.

"One thing that seems to be a reoccurring theme is a concern that Lauro Cavazos is really here to run a medical school," Cavazos said. "I've done that one, and I assure you, never again."

Cavazos said he intends to participate in the Health Sciences Center and make it easier for communication to exist between himself and Med School officials. But he said he did not like the terms "The Medical School" and "The University."

"To me they are one," he said. "This is a major multi-purpose university. This side of the campus, on this side of the railroad tracks, is not the university."

A second concern for Cavazos is the complaint that outstanding teachers at Tech are not rewarded and outstanding research is not understood. Cavazos said he didn't have the answers to the problem, but suggested that faculty members should remember that they have three missions: teaching, research and service to the community.

"We all do different things better, but let's strive to get a mix," he said. "I don't think Tech can afford too many full-time teachers or too many full-time researchers."

Thirdly, Cavazos addressed the issue of faculty salary, acknowledging that Tech faculty salaries are in "pretty bad shape."

"We are, on the average, below the other three major institutions in the state and I am really concerned about how to maintain top faculty," Cavazos said. "We need to take our precious few hard dollars and spread them in a different way."

Cavazos said he is not shy about asking for money. But the solution may lie in figuring out innovative ways to find the difference between what Tech receives from the state and what it needs, he said.

Research is a high priority for Cavazos. He repeated his earlier dedication to establishing interdisciplinary research in nutrition, energy and health at Tech.

"Why am I emphasizing these areas? Because the strengths are already present in these areas at Tech and we should draw on our strengths," he said.

But Cavazos said he hasn't forgotten about the other areas such as the arts and humanities. Those disciplines, he said, make the difference between an educated person and a technician.

"I intend to work with those areas because we're graduating educated people," he said.

In response to a question regarding faculty cuts in compliance with Gov. Clements suggestions, Cavazos said he felt a five percent across-the-board cut was no way to run an institution.

"Cutting faculty is cutting the heart of the institution, but we have commitments there that must be met," he said. "I have no real answers to the question, but, yes, we should make sure we're running a tight ship."

Faculty reaction to Cavazos' address seemed to be positive.

"I was very impressed. I hope we can help him get on with the job," said Angela Boren, assistant professor of food and nutrition.

Marvin Dvoracek, associate professor and chairperson of agriculture engineering and technology, said he appreciated Cavazos' dwelling on the strengths of the university.

"I found him to be a very straight-shooting individual," Dvoracek said.

Dr. Richard Lockwood, vice president of the Health Sciences Center, called the speech a good beginning, and said it was too soon for Cavazos to start having all the answers.

In closing, Cavazos said the faculty meeting did not solve any issues or take any great steps.

"But we got started today," he said.

Water shortage hits North Texas town

GRAFORD, Texas (AP) — First the small reservoir that supplies this North Texas town with drinking water dried up. That was two weeks ago, and the town began pumping water from the creek below the dam.

Then the creek dried up. Now the town has been without water for four days, and officials admit they don't know what to do.

"The situation is critical," said Arlene Howard, city secretary and tax assessor.

"Without water, our sewer system will be stopped up. We'll have a health hazard because people can't flush their commodes. If we have a fire, we don't have water to fight it," she said.

City officials thought school would have to close Tuesday, but they managed to hook up a well on the school grounds.

The town, about six miles east of Possum Kingdom Lake, has never run out of water before.

"We have had to ration every summer, but it usually rains in the winter. This winter, it didn't. We had no measurable rainfall in March. I'd say we're 12 to 15 inches short for the winter," Mrs. Howard said.

The area was under a stormy weather watch Monday, but no rain fell here. Two weeks ago, the town imposed rationing when its small reservoir dried up. The town began pumping water from Keechi Creek below the dam until it went dry Saturday.

On Sunday, residents borrowed farmers' milk trucks to haul water 12 miles from Mineral Wells.

Monday, however, the milk trucks had to return to the milk business, and the town decided it could not afford $500 a day for the imported water.

Mrs. Howard said 70 percent of the residents have low or fixed incomes. "That's why we're so low on funds," she said. "People move out here to retire because they can live cheaper here. It's throwing too big a load on our citizens."

The tax rate is $1.50 per $100 valuation.

"We're not even breaking even now on water and sewer revenues," Mrs. Howard said. "We're going in the hole every month with repairs, inflation and this, that and the other."

The city is using water revenues to make sewer bond payments of $398 a month, she said.

The 43-year-old water system constantly breaks down, she added.

Forum participants for Affirmative Action

By REAGAN WHITE
UD Reporter

By a count of 19 to 9, participants in Tuesday's University Forum voted against the motion that all Affirmative Action programs in education and employment should be terminated.

The kick-off speaker in favor of the resolution was Harold E. Sheppard, director of personnel for T.I.M.E.-D.C., Inc.

Speaking against the resolution was Tom Witt, an Affirmative Action officer and director of personnel for Lubbock.

Sheppard opened his comments by stating Affirmative Actions programs result in a loss of basic rights by both minorities and whites by creating a double standard of evaluation for different races.

Affirmative Action programs make equal opportunities in education and employment a political instead of a social responsibility, Sheppard said.

Sheppard said because the government made equal opportunity a responsibility, an inevitable deluge of paperwork brought on by bureaucracy invalidated intended benefits of the program.

In an effort to qualify for additional federal funds, the bureaucracy in charge of the programs generated false and warped statistics concerning Affirmative Action needs, Sheppard said.

The continuous push for numbers, goals and quotas lower the quality of the benefits offered by the programs, Sheppard said.

The result of many Affirmative Action programs has been crowded courts, where the backlog of cases has been extended from months to years as a result of a glut of Affirmative Action lawsuits, he said.

Sheppard concluded his remarks by emphasizing he is committed to equal opportunity employment and education. However, Affirmative Action programs are not law, but simply tools to accomplish equal opportunity. If the tool does not work, "you should throw it away," he said.

Witt opened his remarks against the proposal by stating prejudices that have been the source of suffering for minorities in the past persist today, and vigorous Affirmative Action is needed to help rectify inequalities in both education and employment.

Blacks are currently unemployed at a rate two and one half times as great as whites, he said. Black youths are no more fortunate than adults, because while the unemployment rate for white youths has gone down, it has gone up for black youths, Witt said.

Most blacks are at or below poverty levels, and the gains made in the '60s to offset this trend have been eroded by the economic trends of the '70s, he said.

Witt said this situation is crucial not only to blacks but to America as a whole. "The current situation regarding minority unemployment is a devastation tax on our economic system," he said.

Reagan to visit

Republican presidential front-runner Ronald Reagan will bring his campaign to Lubbock today in anticipation of the May 3 Texas primary.

Reagan, 69, will hold a rally at the Aftch Airport off Highway 87 at noon today after he arrives from Washington.

After the rally, the former California governor will hold a press conference and then continue on his campaign trail by going to Amarillo and Nebraska.

Tech's Reagan campaign chairman Russell Little said he expects a turnout of 3,000 at the rally.

Military helps Iranians find asylum

By The Associated Press

U.S. military personnel have been assigned to help Iranian pilot trainees find ways to stay in this country, Air Force spokesmen in Texas said Tuesday.

But so far, there was no word that any Iranian student pilot had asked for political asylum.

Ninety-nine pilot trainees stationed at four bases in Texas were among 203 nationwide ordered to leave the country before midnight Friday or face arrest and deportation. Their visas were recalled in the wake of President Carter's break in diplomatic relations with Iran.

Some Iranian student fliers arrived before the Shah was ousted, and several have married American women.

Faculty members awarded

Four Tech faculty members were honored as Outstanding Teachers for 1979-80 at a general faculty meeting Tuesday.

Receiving the $1000 awards were Joyce Arterburn, instructor of health, physical education and recreation, John Burns, associate professor of biological science, John Gillas, professor of music, and James T. Smith, chairman and professor of petroleum engineering.

The Outstanding Teacher award is sponsored by Amco Foundation and is based on four criteria: intellect, impact on students, concern for students and preparation for classes. Instructors are nominated by their peers and evaluated by students.

UD staff applications available

Friday is the deadline for students to apply for staff positions on The University Daily for the 1980-81 academic year, according to newly-elected editor Chino Chapa.

Applications are available in Room 102 of the Journalism Building. Chapa said persons applying for positions should return their applications to Room 102 and should also leave their stringbooks.

Staff positions open for the year include managing news editor, layout editors (2), entertainment editor, sports editor, reporters (8), entertainment writer, photographers (2), and sports writers (2).

Interviews for the positions will be next week, Chapa said.

Carter urges allies to pressure Iran

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration, raising anew the possibility of a blockade of the Persian Gulf, warned U.S. allies Tuesday that their oil supplies could be jeopardized unless they cooperate in pressuring Iran to free its 50 American hostages.

The question of new action against Iran arose when White House press secretary Jody Powell was asked to assess the reaction of U.S. allies to President Carter's announcement Monday of new sanction, including the breaking of diplomatic relations with the Tehran government.

Tornadoes hit Texas

ROUND ROCK, Texas (AP) — At least two tornadoes buzzed Central Texas Monday, killing one man and injuring at least seven other persons.

Homes and buildings were unroofed, utility lines were ripped away and barns were toppled in the storm.

The first tornado destroyed a house in this town north of Austin and killed Mijim Ortega, 52, who was inside. The twister peeled the roofs from several buildings and damaged about a dozen other houses before traveling to Lund.

Police said 15 homes in Lund were hit, including three that were destroyed. A frame church was moved about 15 feet from its foundation, and seven persons in and around the small farming community were hurt. No one was seriously injured.

As many as eight barns were flattened, and utility lines in the area were blown down.

Bank officer predicts economy decline

HOUSTON (AP) — The chief executive officer of one of the nation's largest banks predicted Tuesday that the economy will soon begin a sharp decline and that interest rates will tumble within the next six to nine months.

Walter B. Wriston, chairman of Citicorp and Citibank of New York City, also said if the federal government continues "down the path" of centralized energy planning the "lines in front of the gas station may well seem like the good old days."

Wriston spoke to about 415 businessmen attending the two-day conference on world trade conditions sponsored by The Center for International Business.

He told a new conference after his speech that he has a "gut feeling if the prime interest rate is not at the top now, it is so close that it will not make any difference."

STOCKS

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices rallied in late trading today after a prominent banker said he thought interest rates may have peaked.

The market, down in the morning in a continuation of Monday's slide, had recovered slightly before Walter Wriston, the chairman of Citicorp, said he expected interest rates to decline within six to nine months.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which had fallen 15.79 on Monday, rose 6.66 to close at 775.00.

Advances outnumbered gainers by a margin of more than 3-2 on the New York Stock Exchange.

Big Board volume totaled 31.70 million shares, against 29.13 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index rose .55 to 57.38.

Carter action could eliminate political 'ifs'

James Reston

(c) 1980 N.Y. Times News Service

This has been a presidential election of surprises, blunders and foreign events beyond the control of any of the candidates. Accordingly, all the mathematical delegate-counts and guesses about the final outcome are likely to be misleading if they leave out of the count the unpredictable element of accident in the final months of the campaign.

In a way, all the candidates are hostages or prisoners of the maddening but fascinating gamble of democratic politics. Looking back, all of them say "if only" this or that hadn't happened, the race for the most influential office in the world might now be quite different.

IF THE PRESIDENT hadn't defied the advice of some of his advisers not to bring the shah or Iran into the United States . . .

If the Soviets hadn't invaded

Afghanistan just when Carter was touching bottom in the popularity polls

If Edward Kennedy had come into the race a month earlier or a month later, and hadn't gone on television with Roger Mudd of CBS . . .

IF THE administration hadn't stumbled into a tangle of mistakes in its vote on Israel at the U.N., and its repudiation of its vote, and its mystifying clarification of its vote . . .

If former President Gerald Ford had followed his instinct and judgment to get into the race instead of following the delegate count and his good-guy qualities . . .

And so on.

BUT "IF" is the saddest word in the dictionary. Ask Richard Nixon, or, if you could, Lyndon Johnson, Hubert Humphrey, Adlai Stevenson, and all the other also-rans.

More relevant are the "ifs" of the future. Leaving aside the problems of inflation, prices, interest rates, unemployment, the Carter budgets and the problems of the poor — which would be leaving aside quite a lot — there are some other critical questions coming up.

What will Rep. John Anderson of Illinois do when he is rejected by the Republican Party? The guess here is that home holds no terrors for John, and that, having come out of the obscurity of the House of Representatives, and won the adoration of many of the young, he will go back to Rockford, Ill., and like Adlai Stevenson of Bloomington, Ill., console himself with the respect of his neighbors.

BUT NOBODY can be sure. Like Jimmy Carter, John Anderson is a deeply religious man. But also like Carter, he is not immune to ambition or the cheers of his limited crowd, or to his regret about the general disappointment in both major parties about the likely choice between Carter and Reagan.

It is possible, but not likely, that Anderson could run as an independent candidate. If he did, he could probably decide the election by taking more votes from Carter than from Reagan, and throw the election to his own Republican Party. That is one "if" that worries the Carter people more than almost anything else — including Kennedy.

The history of independent candidates has been a disaster, but Eugene McCarthy demonstrated in his independent challenge to Lyndon Johnson, that even if he got only 250,000 votes as an independent, this was enough to take four or five electoral state votes from the Democrats, and in a close race, this could make all the difference.

THERE ARE other possible developments overseas that could change the course of this election. All the squabbling Iranians are furious about the flight of the shah of Iran from Panama to Egypt, and are talking about breaking diplomatic relations with the United States, and putting the American hostages on trial as spies.

Sandstorm survival takes strategy

Carmon McCain

Navigating during sandstorms is a dirty job and it seems Lubbockites have been doing their share of that lately.

However, there are a number of things I've learned regarding sandstorms I would like to pass on to Techsians when they find the blue sky turned to brown again.

BLINDED BY THE FLIGHT — The proper attire is essential to survive Lubbock-variety dusts.

Ski affectionados shouldn't hang up their goggles just because no snow is on the ground. Why let the goggles gather dust in the closet when they can save you from the dust outside?

Starving college-types can substitute chemistry goggles for the ski variety at a cheaper cost.

Hard hats are optional equipment and may be used to keep medium-sized rocks, flying coke cans and Volkswagens from hitting the head.

An ideal all-in-one piece of protection would be an army surplus gas mask. The mask would shield the eyes from dust and protect sensitive nasal passages from sand and the sometimes odorous Lubbock wind.

FLY AWAY — Exercise buffs probably have never thought about adding paper chasing to their regular work-outs. Very little equipment is required and the results are amazing.

Just drop a valuable piece of paper (the notes from a lecture from a skipped class or a dollar bill) and try to catch it in a 35 mile per hour wind while carrying a loadful of books.

It's harder than it looks. Push-ups can also be incorporated into the sandstorm survival preparations.

People have a tendency to lean into the wind, particularly while it is gusting.

When the wind suddenly stops blowing for a split-second, these over-balanced individuals usually fall on their faces. Thus, the need for push-ups into the program.

BROWN FROWN — Talking and smiling is not advised during duststorms as teeth will be coated by a fine layer of dust particles. Chapstick is definitely out-of-the-question unless the wearer wants healthy, dust encrusted lips.

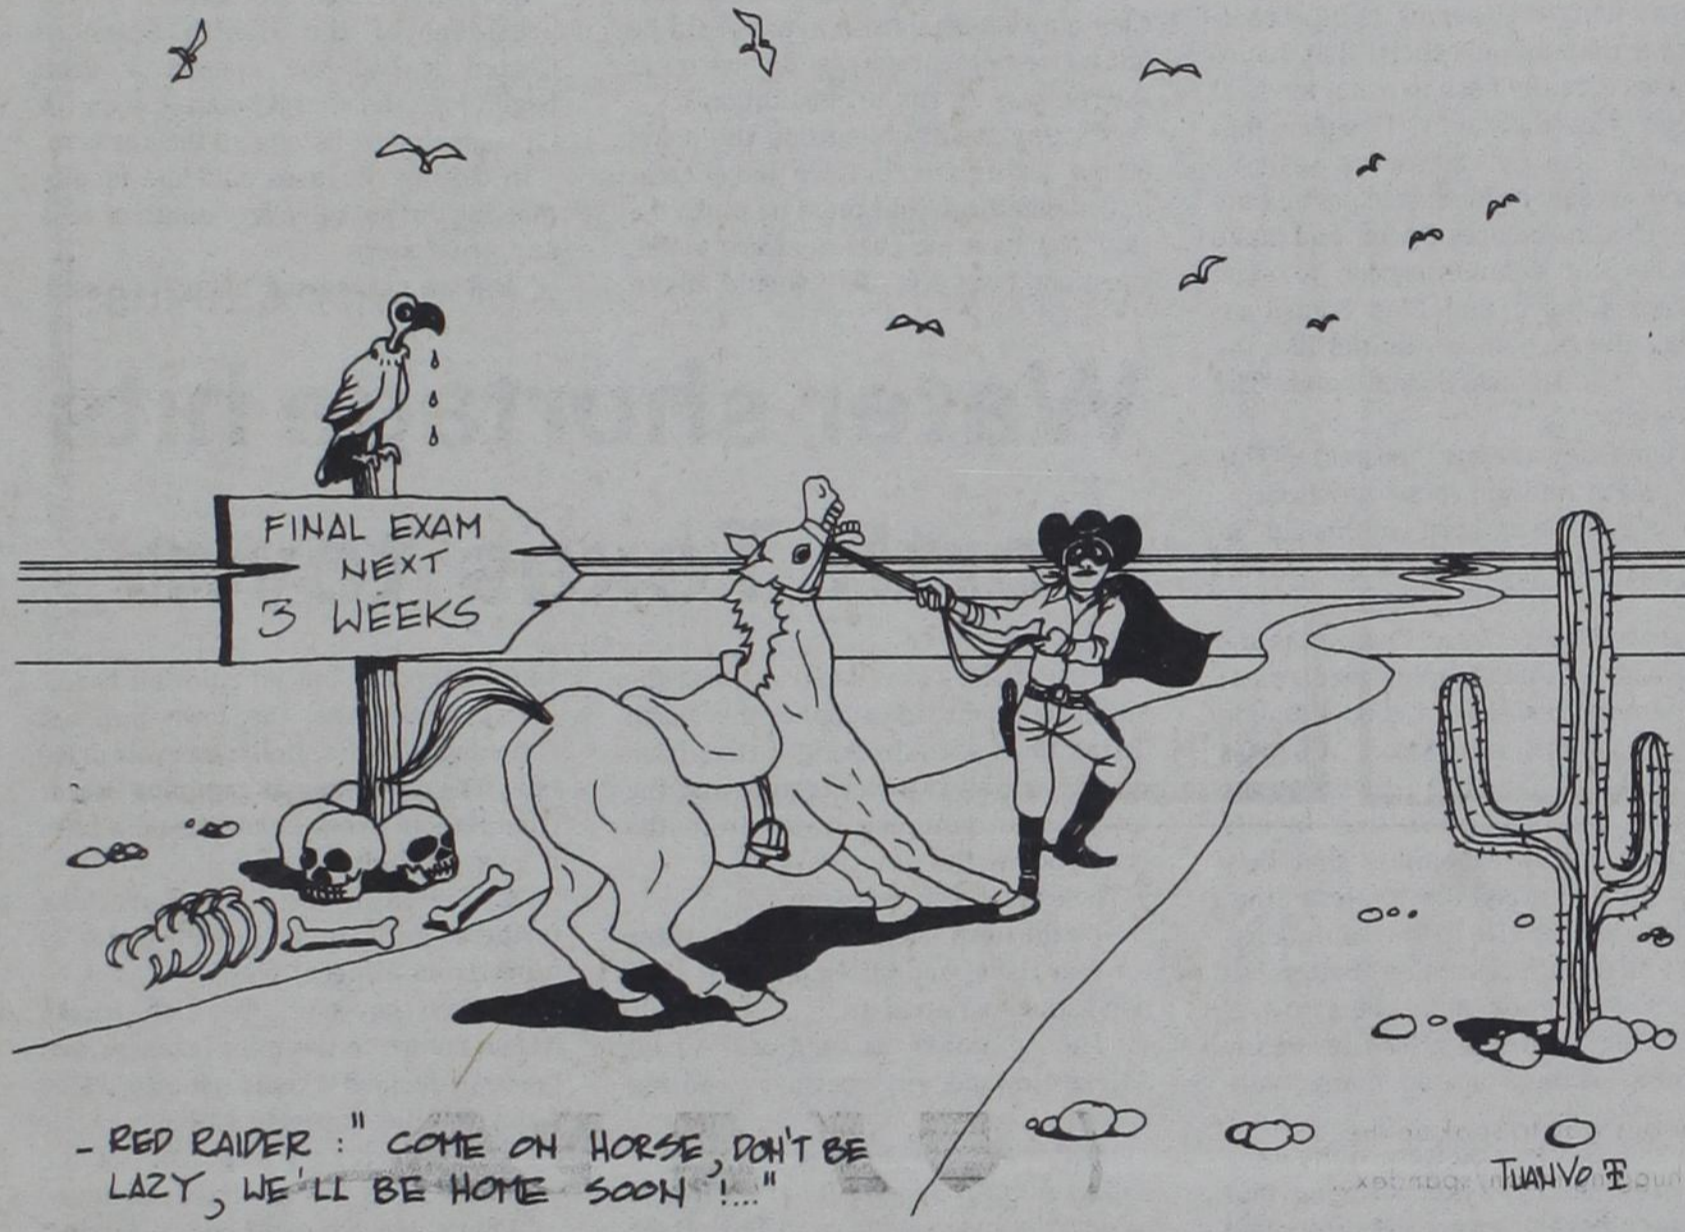

Hairstyles are best forgotten as whatever style is blown into a tangled mess. Scarves supply minimal protection against the elements and some women have resorted to other tactics.

They gather their hair, rest it on their shoulder and hold the ends in their hand.

This is fine, but the results look as if the individual is wearing half of a fur collar.

If Techsians don't approve of the West Texas weather, all they have to do is wait 30 minutes and it will likely change.

In the meantime, they can always go home and curl up with a good book, "Gone With The Wind."

Letters:

Printing mistakes

To the Editor:

I am a junior public relations-journalism major who feels it is necessary to warn other students about the hazards of a printing shop here in Lubbock.

Recently, I was assigned a newsletter by one of my professors. My group spent many hours designing, cutting, pasting and proof-reading the newsletter for mistakes before we took the finished product to a "reliable" printer.

I called the company ahead of time and described my newsletter to the clerk. She in turn gave me an estimate and assured me that if I had the newsletter in that day that it would be printed by the "best quality" method and ready by April 1.

I took the newsletter to the company and the clerk (I thought) wrote down all the necessary information about how to print the newsletter. I left with the feeling that I had found a trustworthy printer.

March 31 came and I called the printer to see if the copies were finished and I was told they were. They told me the charge would be $18 and I assured her that there had to be a mistake, the first call estimated the job to be $46. They told me to come by the shop, so I did before my next class.

Upon arriving at the shop and seeing the completed newsletter, I was shocked. There were white spots on the front page design and throughout the entire product. The newsletter was also printed on a cheap paper which I had specified that it not be.

There were pencil marks on the finished products which were put on the original by the clerk who took the order and had not been erased. The clerk then told me that the instructions for it to be printed "best quality" had not been put on the order.

I was told I would have to talk to the manager and upon doing so, he told me that if I wanted to re-run the newsletter by "best quality" that it would cost $70. He also told me that if I wanted to re-run the newsletter with some corrections that would not have been necessary with the "best quality" printing that they would do so with no extra charge.

I decided to show the newsletter to my professor before I took any actions and he assured me that he wouldn't downgrade our group because of the poor printing job.

I returned to the printer with the original with the hopes of re-running the product; however, the clerk told me that they would have to charge me nine dollars more plus the original $18.

I told them no thanks, paid the bill and left with my 50 copies which I had to turn in for my class, poor printing or not.

I do not feel that any consumer, student or not, should have to put up with this type of service when there are plenty of other good printing companies here in Lubbock.

If this letter warns just one person about this kind of misrepresentation, then this letter and my publicizing my mistake will have been worth it.

I can assure this printing company, which will have to remain un-named, that they will never have any more of my business nor will I ever refer them.

Lobby protest

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following letter also was signed by 20 other persons.

To the Editor:

This letter is being written to protest the lobby renovation in Gordon Hall.

We feel spending $10,000 to replace a door with a wall and move the phones from one wall to another is a waste of our dorm fees. We also fail to see the need for carpeting, new furniture and new light fixtures. The most flagrant misuse of funds is the commissioning of Dick Cheatham to paint a mural at a cost of $1800.

Many residents did not choose Gordon Hall because of the aesthetic qualities. The residents chose the dorm because it is the lowest cost housing on campus. The $10,000 could, and should, have been used to lower the room and board rates for the residents of Gordon Hall.

We think that before an expenditure of such magnitude is made, all residents should be informed. The dorm council failed to inform the residents who were unable to attend the meetings.

We realize that this letter is too late to have an effect on the current renovation, but we hope to prevent further actions without first consulting the affected residents.

Frisbee action

To the Editor:

Fantastic!!!

I was beginning to think Tech was the only major university in Texas that didn't have any interest in a Frisbee Club.

SMU, A&M, and UT have had disc clubs and organized disc activities for some time.

Both SMU and A&M have Ultimate teams that, I am sure, would welcome another team to compete with, possibly on an intercollegiate level as do many of the east and west coast schools do.

As Mr. Stall mentioned, there are many dimensions to disc play. Some require a few advanced skills, but all are just as enjoyable to see as to participate in. Due to the young age of the sport, new games and competitive events are appearing yearly.

The infamous winds of Lubbock do tend to cut down amount of time one may play, but with the new recreational facilities available, I hope to see much more disc flying around the campus.

Anyone who has any kind of interest in flying discs is again urged to go to the recreational sports office on the second level of the Recreation Center and sign up for the Frisbee Club. You won't be the alone.

Creationism

To the Editor:

This is being written in response to rising national desire to have the creationism theory taught in schools instead of the evolution theory.

This writer is a Techsan born-again christian and knows which theory is of his preference but will try to present an objective point of view.

Especially in the South (i.e., the Bible Belt) an annoyance to the propagation of the evolution theory of Charles Darwin has been bred since this theory is becoming accepted as fact.

Darwin himself in "Recapitulation and Conclusion" (the Origin of Species) wrote in the 40th paragraph of his religious friend's letter that said, after he'd read the book . . .

He (God) created a few original forms capable of self-development into other needed forms" and Darwin stated in the 58th paragraph "There is grandeur in this view of life, . . . having been originally breathed by the Creator . . ." and Darwin never mentioned any of his speculations without tagging on the word theory.

My alternative proposal is that universities and some elite high schools induct a class that presents unbiased teachings of both theories (creationism and evolutionism).

This would probably be preferred by non-science majors. Further education in either theory could be studied electively in that area.

Techsan could intern under congressman

By TIM TENGVALL
UD Staff

Most students will spend their summer vacation working, and freshman Clint Cook will probably be among them. His job, however, could be as an intern to U.S. Congressman Charles W. Stenholm in Washington, D.C.

Cook has been named one of the eight finalists for the two Omar Burleson Congressional Internships in Washington this summer.

Cook said he is not a stranger to Stenholm or Washington. He has served as national president of the National Rule Electorate Cooperation Association (NRECA), and he has also served on the Youth Consulting Board of the NRECA.

Cook said he met Congressman Stenholm during his year as NRECA president. "I guess I made about four trips to Washington during that year," Cook said.

Cook's experience in government activities is not limited to the NRECA. Clint has also spoken at the National FFA Convention and the National Grange Convention.

He was the official host of the 1978 Government-in-Action Tour to Washington. He also presided at the Youth Day activities at the same event.

Cook said he feels his past experience in government activities was the main reason he was named to the finals.

"I think that Congressman Stenholm saw that I was interested in the goings on in the political arena and that (was why) he asked me to work on his campaign staff," Cook said.

Stenholm not only recommended Cook for the internship, he provided him with four other references to use on his application.

Applicants for the Burleson Internships, named for former Congressman Omar Burleson, must be 18 years old, and enrolled in an institution of higher learning or live in the 17th Congressional District.

The interns will have numerous responsibilities, Cook said. They will be exposed to legislative research and reporting, (including attendance at subcommittee and full committee hearings and markups), legislative correspondence dealing with constituent problems with Federal Agencies and a broad spectrum of Congressional work. The design of the intern program is to make the program a learning experience for the individual, Cook said.

Whether he spends the summer in Washington as an intern or at home, Cook said he feels happy and proud just to be named to the finalists.

"I'm just happy to be one of the finalists," Cook said. "There were 46 applicants, and only eight finalists. That's something to be proud of."

Tech's revived bicycle race not copy of Indiana's 'Little 500'

EDITOR'S NOTE: Today is the deadline to apply to enter Tech's Bike Race scheduled for April 20. Teams who wish to enter may complete the applications in the Student Association office, located on the second floor of the University Center.

By Joel Branderberger
UD Reporter

newly revived bicycle race and the University of Indiana's successful "Little 500" race, Student Sen. Beth Pasewark said the races are in no way connected.

"I really don't like to compare the two," Pasewark said of the races. "We're trying to revive an old tradition at Tech, not copy someone else's race."

Tech will hold its first bicycle race since the early 1970s on April 20 when the Student Association in conjunction with the Ex-Students Association sponsors the event at the R.P. Fuller Track Field.

Pasewark is chairperson of the Senate Alumni Relations Committee, which was charged with planning the race.

Pasewark said all of the organization has paid off, but added that the race still came very close to not being held.

"First we had the problems with the helmets," Pasewark said, "then we didn't think we could get enough people to work for us."

The helmet problem that Pasewark referred to was buying protective helmets for all participants in the race.

"We didn't really have to buy helmets for everyone because they would have signed a waiver relieving the SA of responsibility, but we felt we had a moral obligation to at least buy helmets," said Jim Halpert, SA internal vice president.

After the Ex-Students Association agreed to help, the problem of costs was negated, but Pasewark still couldn't get anyone to help with the final preparation for the race.

Pasewark made a plea for help at a meeting of the student senate and finally gained the support she needed to finish preparing the race.

"It may sound funny, but now I have more help than I need," Pasewark said.

Rules for the race will be basically simple. Each team will have four riders and one coach. In addition, each team will be allowed a back-up bicycle in case its original one breaks down.

The race will be 80 laps (20 miles) for the men's teams and 40 laps (10 miles) for women's teams.

A door prize as well as a traveling trophy will be presented at the race.

Pasewark said she hopes the race will help improve relations between students, alumni, and members of the Lubbock community.

"If this works out, it could really be something," Pasewark said. "I hope it eventually will become something like a spring homecoming for the alumni."

Right now, the fall has its homecoming with a football game, why not spring with a bike race?

Among the things Pasewark hopes will promote that attitude is a mixer that the Student Foundation will be holding at Coldwater the coming weekend.

Spring fashions to be modeled

Sportswear, casual dress and disco will be some of the styles modeled in the Michael Morris Fashion Show scheduled for 8 p.m. Thursday in the University Center Theatre.

More than 20 models will show fashions from the Ranch and Dillard's. Hair styles will be courtesy of Hair By Diane.

Jeff King of KSEL Radio in Lubbock will be guest announcer.

Proceeds from the fashion show will go to the Michael Morris Scholarship Fund. The scholarship will be given to a Tech student later in the semester.

Entertainment between the modeling sessions will include a short informative talk by Gloria Madrid of the Robert Spence School of Modeling in Lubbock and music by Marcel Murry and His Combo.

Cost of the fashion show is $2.50 for students and $3 for the general public.

Students helped by Interchange

Night can be a lonely time, when problems seem insurmountable. But from 6 p.m. to midnight daily, a Tech telephone hotline named Interchange serves to make the night more bearable for people who seek help.

Interchange is run by the Student Association and the Counseling Center at Tech. It is operated by Counseling Center staff and volunteers who man the phones seven nights a week.

"Volunteers go through fairly intensive training in communication skills and listening," said Marc Schoen, Interchange director. "The volunteers are given as much applied training as possible, including how to deal with specific types of calls. They are given information on drugs, pregnancy, abortion and venereal disease."

The type of call received varies with the time of year, Schoen said. The majority of calls involve personal problems such as depression, suicide, grades, girlfriend-boyfriend breakups, roommate fights and disagreements with parents.

Another type of call often received involves questions about and problems with birth control, pregnancy and abortion, Schoen said. A large part of Interchange is making referrals, or telling the callers with whom to get in touch for help with their particular problems.

Interchange receives about 20 calls per night, mostly from students, said Schoen. The number of calls has increased since the opening of Interchange six years ago.

Each volunteer works one night a week. Two or three people serve each night, with a back-up psychologist supervisor on call for emergencies or to answer general questions.

"People who need help but are afraid to seek it use Interchange," Schoen said.

Play explores character levels

By INEZ RUSSELL
UD Entertainment Editor

Most people are not what they seem. And the same can be said for a character in a play.

Sam Thompson, an actor who is appearing in the University Theater's production of "That Championship Season," keeps the different levels of a person's character in mind while he prepares for the play. "That Championship Season" opens at 8:15 p.m. Thursday in the University Theater. Call 742-3601 for ticket reservations. Thompson does two things to prepare for a role.

"I look at the character externally, and check out his physical features. I then go internally and see what the character has to offer," Thompson said.

"I see the character as having three levels, almost the way people are. At rock bottom is the character we never show. Then we have our party faces," Thompson said.

"The play is about a reunion — a party. Then there's the in between. The characters have taken off their party faces and Entries are being accepted for the second Directions poetry and fiction competition. The deadline for accepting entries is Friday. All entries should be typed, double spaced and fiction entries must be under 10 pages.

Photographs also will be accepted to illustrate the poetry and fiction winners. All photographs must be black and white.

Entries can be submitted to Inez Russell in Room 208 of the Journalism Building.

Winning entries will appear in the April 18 issue of Directions.

show their bitter side. But they still have their defenses up so as not to show rock bottom," he said.

"Two of the characters are brothers. It's hard for them to tell about each other. I play the younger brother, Tom," Thompson said.

"Tom is the most apathetic of all the characters. He's an alcoholic. He's a bum. But he does care about all those guys.

And he hates to see what they've become. So he puts on a mask. He appears real sarcastic. He appears to be a real bastard. But there's a reason he's why he is," Thompson said.

Tom, like all the characters in the play, Thompson said, is not the man he wanted to be.

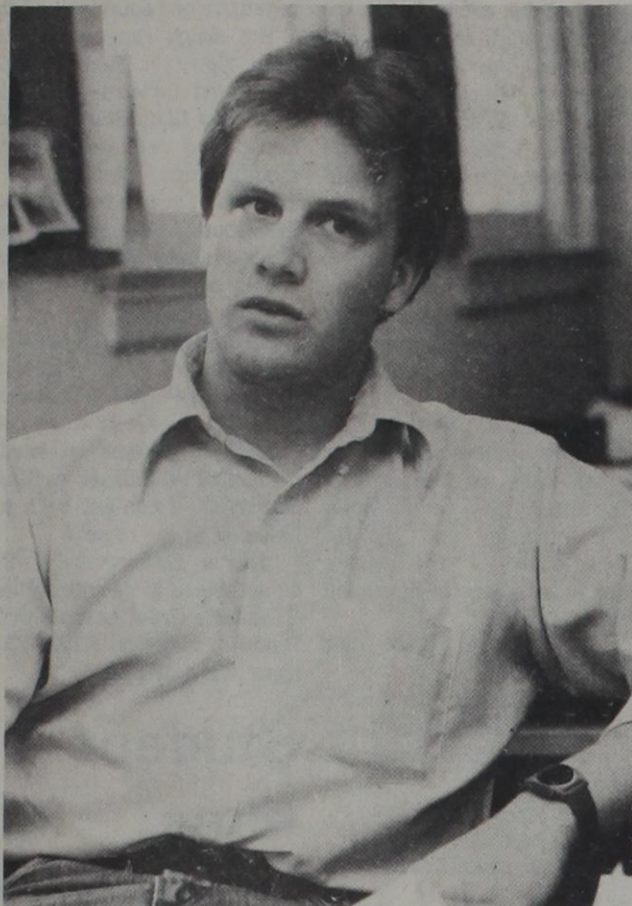

Through his sarcasm, he points out the weaknesses of the other characters.

"Some of them don't care — or they say they don't. But they do want love. That's the basis of this whole show.

There's love at the bottom." Besides the base of love at the bottom of the show, Thompson said, there is also a great deal of emotion and power in the play.

"The play hits right home. The real powerful stuff happens early. It's a short script, and he (Jason Miller) packs it well. There's no resting in the script," Thompson said.

At one point in the play, the power in the script becomes frightening, Thompson said.

THE LATE GREAT LOST RECORD REVIEW

(OR...ALBUMS YOU MIGHT HAVE MISSED)

By m.w. Clark

A psychedelic classic from the Elevators

This is one review I don't want to write. Instead I'd rather just sit and listen to this album a few more times. In fact, the more I listen to it, the more I love it. The album, "Easter Everywhere," was released in 1968 by a Texas group called the 13th Floor Elevators. You might think that they are a country and western or swing band coming from Texas, but don't let that fool you. This is one of the greatest psychedelic albums of all time. This is true in spite of the fact that it was recorded on a small, independent label and the mix and the fidelity of the record are substandard in many ways. Original copies of the album are rare, and fortunately, the album has been re-released on import. "Easter Everywhere" is the second album of four by the Elevators. The preceding album "Psychedelic Sounds of the) 13th Floor Elevators" was only a minor success and contained the band's best-known hit to date, "You're Gonna Miss Me," which might be considered punk by today's standards. The group consists of Roky Erickson, lead vocalist of the group, accompanied by Stacy Sutherland, Tommy Hall, Danny Thomas and Dan Galindo. If Dylan had gone to psychedelic extremes in the '60s, he might have sounded something like this group. The material reflects the search (as well as the search of countless others) for perfect knowledge, truth and understanding. The Bible and self-revealed understanding are the two main sources for this album. Even if you disagree with some of the lyrics, they are satisfyingly thought-provoking. "Slip Inside This House" is the most evident song on the album using references from the Bible. The song's lyrics are intriguing and are far from obvious. The listener has to take time to figure out the meaning. "... If your limbs begin dissolving in the water that you read all surroundings are evolving in the stream that clears your head, find yourself a caravan like Noah must have lead and slip inside this house as you pass by... in this dark we call creation we can be and feel and know from the ever confirmation that's surviving on the go there's infinite survival in the high Baptismal glow just slip inside this house as you pass by... there is no season when you are grown you are always risen from the seeds you've sown... live where your heart can be given and your life starts to unfold in the forms you envision in this dream that ages old on the river layer is the only sayer Psalms 36:8-9 "They feast on the abundance of thy house and thou givest them drink from the river of thy delights for with thee is the fountain of life..." "This house" is not a physical house, but rather a place of contentment, refuge, and security. Water is symbolic in the Bible for its washing and cleansing properties (Baptism). Revelations, the last book of the Bible, in which the visions of the end times are revealed through the servant John, also is referred to in the song in additional lyrics. The other songs on the album are also mesmerizing, if not mind-expanding. Unlike many of the psychedelic groups of that era, the Elevators' music was not repetitive and sound-alike-ish. The songs range in pace from slow ("I Had to Tell You" and Dylan's "It's All Over Now Baby Blue") to the fast-paced rockers ("Earthquake" and "Levitation"). There isn't even a bad song on the album. The guitars interweave and blend with the vocals and flow in a nice unexplainable way. Psychedelic is not a state of music, but of mind. "Easter Everywhere" is a classic, deserving every word of critical praise presented here. Good. I've finished writing this thing. I can get back to listening to the record. "Easter Everywhere" will be presented in its entirety on "The Late Great Lost Record Review" today on KTXU-FM from 3:30-4:30 p.m.

Recruits select colleges today

By JOHN EUBANKS
UD Sports Editor

Today is the first day that high school basketball prospects may sign letters of intent with colleges and if all goes as expected at SMU, the Mustangs may have the early lead among the Southwest Conference schools in the battle for top prospects.

SMU's newly appointed head coach Dave Bliss Monday received verbal commitments from Kirk Lundblade of Plano and John Briggs of Highland Park. Lundblade, a 6-7 forward-center, was selected by the Amarillo Chamber of Commerce's yearly poll as the top schoolboy player in Texas. Lundblade was scheduled to visit Tech late last month but declined the invitation a day before he was scheduled to arrive in Lubbock.

Briggs, 6-8, was named to the first-team All-District 13-AAAA squad this past season. He averaged 16 points and 11 rebounds per game last season.

If Lundblade does sign with the Mustangs' program, he will have spurned an offer from TCU which has been heavily recruiting him.

TCU has already picked up two commitments from Derek Moore of Pittsburgh, Pa. and 6-3 forward Puntus Wilson of Dallas South Oak Cliff.

Moore is a highly touted 6-7, 220-pound forward from Allerdice High School. He averaged 20 points and nearly 20 rebounds a game during his three-year stint at Allerdice.

In committing to TCU, he turned down offers from such schools as St. Johns, Syracuse, Arizona and hometown Pitt University.

In Arkansas, the fight continues for the services of 6-2 guard Ricky Norton of Okolona, Ark. Norton reportedly has narrowed his choices of schools to Arkansas, Arkansas State University and Memphis State University. He is considered the top prospect in Arkansas and one of the top guards in the nation.

The University of Kentucky is reportedly recruiting Norton. Another top Texas prospect, Mike Wacker of San Marcos, will reportedly announce his decision either late Wednesday or early Thursday.

He is being recruited by Tech, Baylor, Texas and Texas A&M, among others.

Raiders bomb Notre Dame, up seasonal record to 7-1

By BILL NOTTURNO
UD Sports Staff

The Tech lacrosse club used a stingy defense and timely scoring to beat the Fighting Irish of Notre Dame 10-2 Saturday in Dallas. The victory raised Tech's overall record to 7-1 and was Tech's sixth straight victory.

Tech moved in front early in the first period when Tech defenseman Chris Walsh darted upfield on a clearing play and let loose with a wicked shot that blasted into the lower left corner of the Irish net.

Tech jumped to a 3-0 first period lead and was ahead 6-0 at the half. Notre Dame controlled the ball in its offensive half of the field by using excellent stickwork and passing. But the Irish were able to score only two goals as Tech's defense, which is allowing an average of only 6.5 goals per game, forced Notre Dame into taking poor percentage shots. When the Irish did get point-blank shots, goalie Willie Schmerler made several outstanding saves.

Tech's offense, which is averaging 14.6 goals per game, was led by attackman Bill Notturmo who had four goals and one assist in the game. Fellow attackmen Roy Jarnigan and Mark Goska each had one goal as did midfielders Alex Stansbury, Mark Mendel and Joe Connor.

Tech is currently in first place in the college division of the Southwest Lacrosse Association with a 6-0 conference record. Tech is a solid choice to repeat as divisional champions as the Raiders have already played all of their major conference competition.

Last year the Tech lacrosse team won the championship in the last game of the season by beating arch-rival Texas A&M 9-8. Tech finished with a 6-0 conference record last year and combined with this year's conference record, Tech has a current conference winning streak of 12 games.

This Saturday Tech will play at home against SMU. Tech defeated the Mustangs 16-3 two weeks ago. The game will be played at 1 p.m. at R. P. Fuller Track stadium.

Netters triumph

The Tech women's tennis team totally dominated their northern neighbor, Wayland Baptist College of Plainview, 6-0 in matches played at the Tech varsity courts Tuesday afternoon. The matches were never in doubt as the Raiders completely outclassed their opponent.

The women netters will take a break this weekend but will return to action in a tournament in the Dallas-Fort Worth metropol.

Recreational Sports

Softball playoffs to begin

The all-university softball playoffs begin Monday for intramural teams maintaining first or second places in their respective league standings.

Women's, men's, and co-rec divisional playoffs will get underway Monday; campus community playoffs begin April 19.

The finals for the week-long playoffs will take place April 20 on the recreational fields across from Stangel-Murdough. The co-rec finals are set for 1:30 p.m. The women's finals will follow at 4 p.m., and the men's finals are scheduled for 5:30 p.m.

Teams qualifying for the playoffs are asked to come by the Rec Sports Office and acquire a tournament bracket.

Playoffs for the women's division of IM softball begin Tuesday night. Twenty-four opening-round games will be held Monday in the co-rec division, and twenty-eight more games will take place in the men's division.

The men's playoffs will include four divisions: open, club, residence hall, and Greek. The Greek championship will be decided at 7:30 p.m. April 17, and the club, residence hall, and open titles will be decided at 8:30 p.m.

Aloha Brothers win tournament

The Aloha Brothers defeated This Is It 65-53 Thursday for the championship of the annual Bookstore Basketball Tournament.

The Sportsters downed the Hot Dogs 51-33 to claim the women's title. Zoo pounded the GOBs 93-63 in the men's game for third place, and the Hot Shots outlasted the Playgirls 42-39 for third place in the women's bracket of the tournament.

The men's contest was tight in the early going, but the Aloha Brothers began to pull away late in the second quarter as former varsity player Kent Williams poured in 13 of his 26 points. The Aloha Brothers led 33-21 at halftime.

Ex-raider Thad Sanders paced This Is It with 25 points. Mark Johnson added 10 points for the losers. Garth Wright scored 12 points for the Aloha Brothers, and Corey Haughland and Steve Gilles added 10 a piece.

Other members of the Aloha Brothers team, which sports a two-year record of 33-2, are: John Cotton, Miles Harnack, Clay O'Neil, Lonnie Tackett, Robert Ochsner, and coach John Ochsner.

No individual scores were kept in the women's championship game. The Sportsters used a pressing defense to muster the firepower needed to overcome the Hot Dogs.

Softball, putt-putt tournaments slated

The Department of Recreational Sports has scheduled a fast-pitch softball tournament for April 21-27 and a putt-putt golf singles tournament for April 23-24.

The deadline for entries for the softball tourney is April 16 for women and April 17 for men. The deadline for entering the putt-putt singles tourney is April 16 for both men and women.

A $10 forfeit fee is required for the seven-day fast-pitch softball tournament. Interested participants can sign up in the Recreational Sports Office, located in the new Student Recreation Center.

The putt-putt tournament will take place from 7-10 p.m. April 23-24. The tourney will be held at the putt-putt course located at 29th and Brownfield Highway.

The cost will be $1.50 for men (36 holes) and $1.25 for women (18 holes).

Participants must sign up in the Rec Sports Office.

For more information concerning either of the tournaments, contact the Department of Recreational Sports at 742-3351.

The Greek champion will play the club division winner at 7:30 p.m. April 18, and the residence hall and open champions will square off at the same time on a different field.

The two remaining survivors will collide at 5:30 p.m. April 20 for the men's all-university championship.

The women's Greek champion will battle the second-place winner in the club division at 6 p.m. Tuesday, while the club champion takes on the second-place team in the open division. Later at 7 p.m., the residence hall champ and the second-place team in the club division will meet, and the open winner and second-place Greek team will square off.

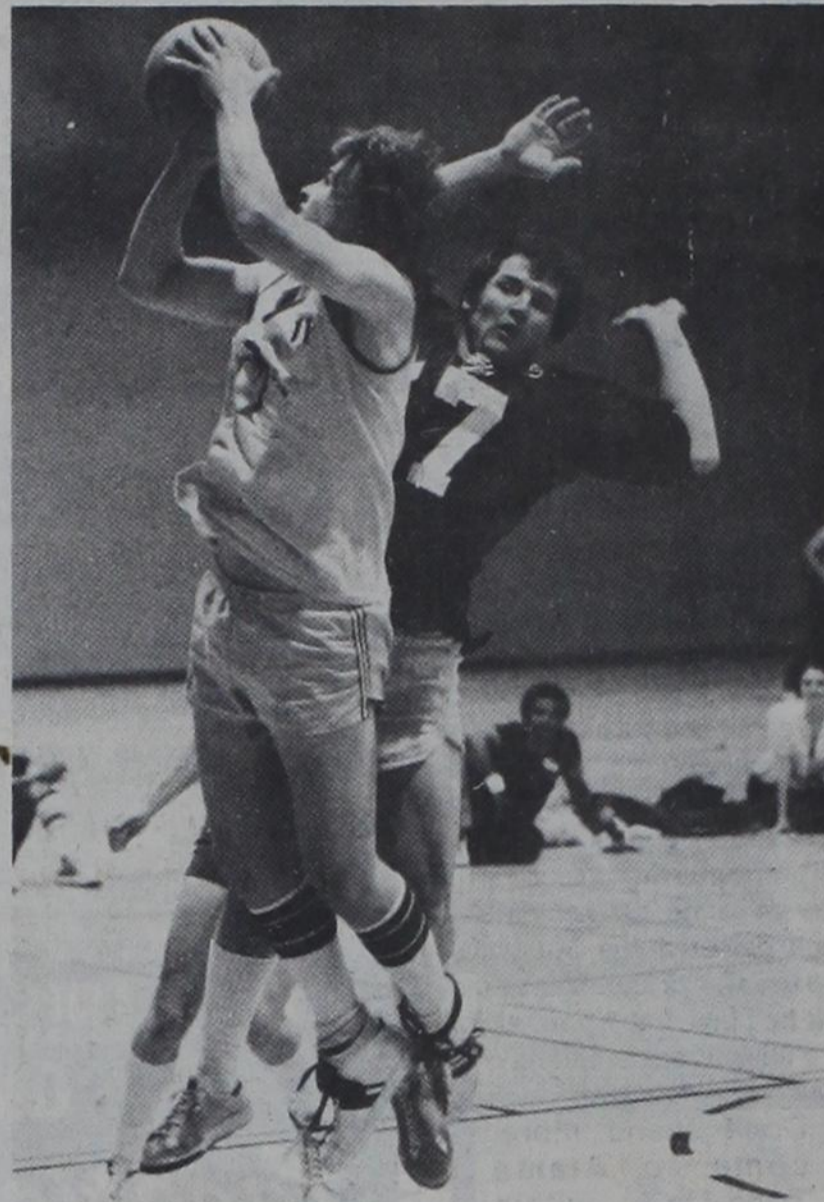

The four survivors will collide at 7 p.m. April 17, and women's intramural softball will culminate with the all-university championship at 4 p.m. April 20.

A host of teams will vie for second-round playoff positions at 5 p.m. Monday night in the first round of the co-rec softball playoffs. Eight teams will vie for semifinal spots in four games scheduled for 5 p.m. next Wednesday. The semifinals are slated for April 17, and the all-university co-rec championship will be decided at 1:30 p.m. the following Sunday.

Eight teams will compete for semifinal positions April 19 in the much smaller campus community playoff field. The semifinals are scheduled for the following Friday, and the "CC" championship will be decided at 10 a.m. April 26.

The intramural softball field will be narrowed considerably during Monday and Tuesday's playoff action. Twenty-eight games are scheduled for Tuesday night. Another 12 contests will take place next Wednesday, and eight contests are scheduled for the night of April 17.

A total of 293 teams submitted entries in 1980's intramural softball action.
